(By the Western Associated Press.)

THE CAPTIVE CHIRICAUAS.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Secretary Lincoln, accompanied by General Crook, called at the Department of the Interior this afternoon and held a long conference with Secretary Teller in regard to the disposition of the Apache captives. At the conclusion of the conference Secretary Teller informed the representatives of the Associated Press that he had decided to receive the captives on the San Carlos Reservation and be responsible for their good behavior. Another conference will be held for the purpose of deciding their disposition. General Crook was present at the conference. Conference with the President.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The President returned from New York last night on a late train and went directly to the Soldiers' Home, where Secretary Lincoln and General Crook are now in consultation with him concerning the disposition of the Chiricauas Indians.

Wasson, July 6.—After leaving the Interior Department Secretary Lincoln and General Crook proceeded to the Executive Mansion, where they met the President. The situation at San Carlos Agency was brought into discussion. No plan was definitely agreed upon. In answer to an inquiry from a reporter, Secretary Lincoln said there was no probability of a disagreement between the War and Interior Departments on this subject. He said, however, that the Indians were not to be released until a plan was agreed upon.

A BATTLE ON THE BORDER.

Reported Battle of Troops by British Forces. HELM, Montana, July 6.—News has been received from the north that the troops under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Miles, of Fort Assiniboine, upon a scout to drive back the British Cree, met the enemy this side of the line on Tuesday and were defeated by the Indians who greatly outnumbered the troops. No particulars of the engagement have been learned. The report is that a courier was sent in all haste to Fort Assiniboine for reinforcements. The report is that a courier was sent in all haste to Fort Assiniboine for reinforcements.

The Report Discredited.

OMEN, U. T., July 6.—A Helena dispatch says the report of a battle between the troops and the Indians is discredited. It is believed that the Indians' command has not met the Indians.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

A Young Wife on a Road to Ruin.

CHICAGO, July 6.—An Osego Lake, Michigan, special says: Alexander Perry, fifty years old, attempted to enter the house of Anna Bidwell while the young wife of the latter was alone. He was seen by the wife, who called for help. He was then shot and killed. The loss is $200,000.

GENERAL DISPATCHES.

A Shan Duet, in which "Texas Sittings" figures. NEW YORK, July 6.—It is reported this morning that the duel reported to have been fought between John Armory Knox and D. B. Sheehan yesterday, which resulted in the wounding of Knox, is a hoax. The principals never left the city. Many are of the opinion that the whole thing is a practical joke originated by Knox in his own interest, and it is certain he had no intention of fighting. Neither of the men has exposed themselves since the first reported breach between them. The whole thing is a practical joke.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE LIVER.

Deceitful Above all Things, and Desperately Overcharged With Bile.

Texas Siftings.

The liver affects the intellectual parts of man. It is the liver and not the heart, that is really the seat of sentiment, of love, of chivalry and of all good and evil emotions. The condition of a man's liver colors and affects all his acts. A man may have ever so warm a heart, and it may be in the right place, but let his liver be out of order and he will kick the first harmless dog he meets.

We often hear of a man harboring malice in his heart. This statement is not correct. All malice resides in the liver. All murderers have damaged and disabled livers. This is a fact that will soon be heralded abroad by the medical profession, and then the day will come when, instead of the monotonous insanity plea, the lawyer for the defense will claim that the deed was done while the prisoner was laboring under a fit of temporary derangement of the liver. If Solomon had lived in these unhealthy times, instead of speaking as he did about the heart, he would have said: "The liver of a man is deceitful above all things and desperately overcharged with bile."

When the preacher draws gloomy pictures of woe, it is his liver that is out of order. When the philosopher predicts calamities and disasters that are about to fall on the people, it is the hinges of his liver that need oiling. When our friend "Taxpayer" writes a letter to his local paper in which he blasphemes monopolies, and demonstrates that the country is misgoverned and is going to the "demnition bow-wows," old Taxpayer means well, but the lappels of his liver are turned the wrong way. When a politician gets on his feet in the house of representatives and denounces the policy of the opposition as "criminal and hurtful to the best interest of the people his liver is in need of repairs. When a man gets cranky and rails at fate, or refuses to pay his dog tax, we should not judge him harshly, his liver may have got jammed in among some of his other organs. Take the case of the Governor of the great state of Texas, on the historic occasion when he positively and firmly refused to take a copy of Texas Siftings out of the Seguin Post-office; he was doubtless suffering from a misplaced liver. He has a notoriously bilious disposition. Such men should not be held to a strict account for their acts any more than lunatics should.

When science shall have so far advanced that the liver of a man will be under control, then and not till then, will the millennium dawn, the sword be turned into a reaping hook, O'Donnovan Rossa lie down with the heir apparent to the English throne, and peace reign o'er all the earth.

Let age, not envy, draw wrinkles on thy cheeks; be content to envy, but envy not. Emulation may be plausible, indignation allowable, but admit no treaty with that passion which no circumstance can make good. A displacency at the good of others because they enjoy it, though not unworthy of it, is an absurd depravity, sticking fast into corrupted nature, and often too hard for humility and charity the great suppressors of envy. This surely is a lion, not to be strangled but by Hercules himself, or the highest stress of our minds, and an atom of that power which subdueth all things unto itself.--[Sir Thomas Brown.]

An Incentive to School Attendance.
Louisville Courier Journal.

A Michigan teacher went to Tennessee last winter and engaged to teach in a district where the poor girls were too proud to go to common school. He soon began to kiss the little girls freely, and in less than three weeks the house was filled with big ones, and old ones too, even a widow discovered her early education had been neglected. The only drawback was that the young men kept constantly challenging him to fight duels, and finally threatened to waylay him. He says he did not practice kissing for the fun there was in, but in the interest of education. He has been employed for next winter, and the big boys have signified their intention of attending school in a body.

A gang of beggars, two men and three women, of most forlorn aspect, were arrested in Massachusetts. On them was found $600 in money, all made during a two months' tramp.

A New Anecdote of Grant.

Wilmington N. C. Star.

We heard some time ago from a Wilmingtonian a story that is so creditable to Grant that we will give it. We had heard it before, but not in a shape calculated to give us confidence in its authenticity. But as we last heard it, and because of the circumstantiality attending it, we may no longer discredit it. After Lincoln's assassination there was a growing sentiment among extreme men in the North that the Southern leaders must be punished and the more famous men hanged. A cabinet meeting was called, and it was resolved to hang at least General Lee, and some one or two others it may be. Grant, at the head of the army, was sent for, and was told what was the action of the cabinet. He deliberately unbuckled his sword, and, laying it upon the table, said: "My honor as a soldier and a man is pledged to General Lee, and if you take the step proposed I at once surrender my sword, resign my commission, and go before the American people." This firmness and promptness brought the extreme men to their senses, and the matter was dropped. We are assured that this story is trustworthy, and it comes through a channel that entitles it to credence. It is honorable to Grant, and shows him in a much grander light than anything he has ever done as President.

A Spiritualistic Medium on Fire.
Indianapolis Sentinel.

Collins Cumberland, a spiritualistic medium, who has been operating among the gullible in Richmond, Indiana, for about a month, came to grief the other night. The weather being cold, a rousing fire was built in the stove of the parlor in which the seance was to occur, and while the medium was warming beside it he was discovered on fire. In an instant one side of his material self was ablaze, and it took a bucket of water to conquer the element and bring him to consciousness, for he fainted dead away. Investigation proved that the heat of the stove had generated gas in a bottle of oil of phosphorous that he carried in his inside breast pocket for "special tricks," and when the stopper popped out the admitted air converted the contents into liquid flame.

General Grant's Fried Chicken.

From a Charlottesville Letter.

General Grant passed through here to-day en route for the North. Charlottesville is a great place for fried chicken, and upon the arrival of all trains the traveler is saluted by cries from a dozen colored women of, "Here's yo' nice fried chicken!" General Grant was vigorously set upon by one of these parties, who had no idea of whom she was addressing. She begged him to buy a chicken leg, and, finally, as the train was moving off, the ex-president dropped ten cents on the waiter, and remarked that he would take the chicken the next time he came through. The old darkey, after the train left was told that she had been talking to the great Gen. Grant, and she replied: "I thought he was a great somebody, case he's the first man who ever paid fo' a chicken leg and didn't eat it."

A West Virginia Curiosity.
Wheeling Special.

There is in Hampshire county, in this state, a human monstrosity, which excels anything Barnum ever exhibited. It is a young woman, or child, born in 1865, and therefore eighteen years old, who is in every thing but age an infant. She is the daughter of Mr. John E. Miller, of Shanesville. A gentleman who recently saw her and learned her age from reliable authority, found her lying in a cradle. She is twenty-eight inches in height, weighs but twenty-five pounds, cannot walk or talk, and eats nothing but milk, which is fed from a bottle. She has, however, a quick perception and remarkable memory, and a brief poem or sentence repeated to her once, and weeks after again repeated, with but one word varying, arouses her anger, and she frowns at the changed word. An article laid down in her room and in her sight may be allowed to remain for days; yet an inquiry for it will be answered by the child by pointing in its direction. She is quite an attractive baby, and no reason for her stunted growth has ever been assigned. The facts narrated above seem to be well attested, and many physicians have visited the child without being able even to conjecture the cause of her condition.

The Tragedies of the Brooklyn Bridge.

From the Utica Observer.

No finer view of the two cities can be obtained than from this elevated position, and it was fully half an hour before I had found time to inquire of an old sailor sitting on a coil of rope if he knew much about the bridge. I half expected him to pull out a printed card, but he must have been out of them, for he said: "Know much about it? Well, I should think so. I've watched it from the word go. I helped sink the caisson. I've been down in it when the pressure was so strong it seemed as if it would break in your ear-drums, and you couldn't blow out a candle but 'twould light up again. I was there when they filled the caisson with thousands of tons of cement and the man got left."

"Got left where?" was my natural question.

"Didn't you never hear that story?" Why there was eighty-six men went to work in the caisson that mornin' and owin' to some mistake in the count, they turned on the steam and poured thousands of tons of cement into her before they found out that only eighty-five had come up. It would have taken a year to pump it out again, and so they charged him to 'profit and loss.' His dinner pail was found on the dock, with his dinner in it."

The old fellow winked his weather eye, but, seriously, the death roll of the bridge is a long one, twenty-eight men having been killed.

DEATH BY TRICHINAE.

A St. Louis Woman Literally Devoured—Other Cases in that City. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The fatal termination of a case of trichinae, noted some time ago, was reported to the clerk of the board of health. The victim was Mrs. Amie Schmeirein. About six weeks ago she and her husband were taken violently sick. As they had been in apparently excellent health for a long time previous, they could not account for the sudden sickness. Dr. Richter was called in, and, after studying the symptoms, came to the conclusion that Mr. and Mrs. Schmeirein had partaken of some unwholesome food. Upon questioning them he ascertained that they had eaten raw ham. He examined the remaining portions of the ham and discovered unmistakable indications of trichinae, the meat being fairly alive with the deadly worm. The doctor applied all his knowledge of the dread disease and used all his skill to save the unfortunate couple. Schmeirein gradually recovered, until he is now past all danger, but his wife was doomed from the first to a lingering death. Her entire system swarmed with the trichinae, which fed upon her muscles, literally devouring her to death. During her illness of six weeks the woman suffered apparently very little pain, and was in a state of gradual decline. The pain endured by her, as well as most persons afflicted with trichinae, was similar to rheumatism. Sunday night death ended her sufferings, and yesterday she was buried. Mr. Schmeirein, although no longer in danger, has not sufficiently recovered to resume work. He and his wife had not been here long and are Germans. Dr. Richter, in speaking of the case, said he thought there was more danger from eating American than German pork. In Germany it is a common practice to eat raw ham and consequently trichinae is detected very frequently. Here, even when a case develops, it is difficult to discover it, notwithstanding a large percentage of the pork is affected, because little or none of the meat is eaten raw. It is said that there are other cases in the southern part of the city.

John Wesley, when preaching against riches said: "To ride in a coach here and to get to heaven hereafter is almost too much for any man to ask."

A man's strength is said to lie in his hair, and a woman's in lying about her hair, claiming that it is all her own.—[Cincinnati Saturday Night.

The Case of Major Nickerson.

From the New York Sun.]

"Mrs. Nickerson," said Mr. J. C. Derby, the well-known publisher, last night, "is now in Washington seeking a divorce from her husband. She is my niece, and I have been in communication with her constantly since her return to this country. The first thing I knew about the treachery of her husband was when I received a cable message from Bremen, in which she said: 'Avoid Nickerson; meet me on arrival of the steamer Elbe.' I was very much surprised when I heard of Nickerson's fraudulent divorce in Philadelphia, for when I had last seen him he was a model husband. He had come on to New York to see his wife and daughter off to Europe, and was very thoughtful of her comfort. It was a shock to every one when Nickerson's proceedings in Philadelphia became known, and my niece hurried on to Washington, where everything possible was done for her. She has had the assistance and sympathy of all the army officers, including the Secretary of War and Gen. Sherman."

"How do you explain Nickerson's conduct?"

"It is inexplicable. He was a brave Union officer, being breveted for gallant conduct at Antietam and Gettysburg. He was severely wounded in the discharge of his duty in both battles. After the war he became chief of staff under Gen. Cooke, whence he was transferred to the post of assistant adjutant general at Washington. Mrs. Nickerson's father established the book house of A. L. Bancroft & Co. in San Francisco in 1850. Her brother is Herbert H. Bancroft, the historian of the Pacific coast. Two of Mrs. Bancroft's sisters married army officers. Lieut. Broderick, who married Mrs. Nickerson's youngest sister, came all the way on from his post in New Mexico to attend the trial in Philadelphia. The meeting between him and Major Nickerson was very affecting. The major was deadly pale throughout the whole proceedings."

Miss Emily Faithful's opinion of men and women, as intelligent, intellectual beings, is very poor indeed; but after all, it may be pure modesty on her part in not over estimating God's work above what, according to her idea of the matter, he himself thinks of it. She says, "God made women fools in order that they should be fit companions for men." Emily is not as yet a "companion," but the right 'fool' will come along in due time, and we doubt very much that Emily will call him a "fool."

The Counsel of Old Age.

Old men give wise counsel where experience alone is the guide. "Washington," says a new historian, "once decided that the Erie canal was not practicable. Sam Houston thought one-half the money Congress voted to Morse to build the first telegraph line ought to be devoted to encourage Mesmerism. Cave Johnson, Post-master General, declined to buy the telegraph patents for the Government for $100,000 on the ground that it could not earn expenses. Ezra Cornell spent two-thirds of Morse's appropriations laying the first poor starveling telegraph underground instead of stretching it like a clothes line. Timothy Howe was sure a fifty cent tax on whisky could not collect so much as a $2 tax. Seward thought 75,000 would put down the Rebellion. The old Baltimore merchant to whom Poe's poems were submitted in dorse them: "Here is a man fit for nothing whatever." Franklin rather thought the Stamp Act a smart recommendation. Commodore Vanderbilt told his son to buy no railroads out of New York State. Old age is for counsel, but it ought to come from the "Amen" benches. All the wisdom in Spain and Portugal discouraged Columbus; but a pretty woman said to the sailor,

"As well to die and go,
As die and stay."

The Boston Pilot says there are over 151,000 Catholic Indians in the United States distributed throughout the following States and Territories: In the State of Maine 1,400; in New York, 900; in Michigan, 4,000; in Wisconsin, 1,480; in Minnesota, 10,800; in Dakota, 2,000; in Kansas, 2,800; in Montana, 7,829; in the Indian Territory, nearly 100,000; in Oregon, 1,600; in California, more than 6,000. The same authority states that more than 100,000 of the negroes of the United States are Catholics.

A couple of ounces of carbolic acid to three quarts of water, sprinkled over the poultry-house through the fine nose of a watering pot, once in three or four weeks, will, it is said, destroy lice and other parasites.

The Health Office reports 91 deaths in San Francisco the past week, sixty of males and thirty-one of females.

Nebraska has 300,000 head of cattle; Colorado 600,000 head; Montana 400,000 and Wyoming 500,000.
